Hi, Elizabeth:

Thanks for the follow-up. I'm back to toiling in obscurity in my miserable little office, so if I may, I'll call in ca. 15 mins., if that works for you. Does it?

Hi again John, you are probably still in your meeting, but I am back at my desk if you'd like to chat some more. I am still gathering information, so if you'd like to wait until I have more to give, I can set up a call for us early next week (I am out of the office Wednesday through Friday this week). If Bret hasn't already sent you the action memo, here it is.

Thanks again,

Elizabeth

Hi, Elizabeth:

I very much appreciate your quick introduction – thanks for putting Eliz. in touch w/me, Mark. When you get a chance, would you mind calling me at my desk, or on the cell (b) (6)

I'm sure Mark has told you what a charming human being I am. Seriously, I do hope he explained that Superfund has been one of my areas of expertise for a very long time, so I won't waste your time with ill-informed questions. I'm sure you inferred that I'm trying to find out how the site may have impacted the City's adjacent property and whether it is within the areal extent of contamination that informs the site as it is going through the HRS evaluation. Politically, things move incredibly quickly here, so much so that the pace of those lovely Congressionals that come through David Gray's office seem glacial. For that reason we have to be on top of things as quickly as possible lest a council person require a briefing.

Anyway, our meeting begins at 2 and probably will run for less than an hour. Therefore, if it's convenient, I would gladly call you once I get back to my desk. Would that work for you?

Hi John, I'm the site attorney for Lane Plating. I'm afraid I'm pretty tied up until after your internal meeting starts today, but will give you a call as soon as I am able.

Thanks so much,

Elizabeth

Hi, Bret:

Thanks again for taking so much time to discuss what you know about the site, and for the help you provided to Joseph Vu, our technical person, last Friday.

Hey, Mark:

I just left you a VM. To whom in your group have you assigned to this? Could you give me a call at your convenience? We're having an internal meeting at 2, and we have to get ahead of this since a City Council person likely will need to be briefed sooner than later.

Thanks a lot.
